I'm using in Matlab so far imshow(imread('test')); h = imline('Line.png',[0,0],[100,100], 'linestyle', 'none'); And here are the two images I want to add A: Here's an explanation of how to draw a line. The line is in the form of a single column, or column vector. In the horizontal direction, it can be represented in MATLAB by a single row vector. If we want to insert a horizontal line (i.e., a line where the vector is always a column vector) we do this: A = [1 2 3 4] This means that the vector contains 1,2,3,4 in the row. Similarly, we can specify a vertical line. For example, if we want to insert a line at y = 10, we can do this: B = [1 2 3 4 5] This means that the vector contains 1,2,3,4,5 in the row. You can insert a line where you specify any number of coordinates, and at any length. Now, you can combine these 2 vectors with the line command to plot a horizontal and a vertical line at the coordinates you specify. In your case, you could do: B(end+1) = 1 This means that the vector will contain 1,2,3,4,5 in the row. You can specify that the point is at the left edge of the image by using: B(end) = 0 which means that the vector will contain 0,1,2,3,4,5 in the row. You can make the line
