It 'isn't worth the paper it's signed on' Trump 'no longer angry' at Romney because of Supreme Court stance MORE's "racist" rhetoric has led to a rise in hate crimes and domestic terrorism. "To me, the best indicator of the effectiveness of Trump's racist rhetoric is the number of hate crimes and the number of domestic terrorists who think Trump is giving license to their bigotry and violence," Cuomo said in a speech on Monday at the New York University Stern School of Business. "And the number of people who think that they are protected by the president is growing. There has been an increase in the number of people who have been inspired to commit domestic terrorism or hate crimes or who have been emboldened to commit hate crimes because of this racist rhetoric that has been coming from the White House," Cuomo added. ADVERTISEMENT Cuomo said the country has "suffered another national tragedy" from "domestic terrorism," pointing to the recent terror attack at a mosque in New Zealand that killed 50 people. Trump has previously said he is opposed to "racism" in the wake of the attack, calling it "evil" and "awful." Trump also earlier this year suggested
