Released in August 1965, it peaked at number 6 in the UK singles chart. In 1965, the Zombies released another single, "She's Not There", the lead track from their debut album. It was a major hit in the UK, peaking at number 10 in March 1965. "Shangri-La" was recorded at De Lane Lea in London, United Kingdom and was produced by Chris Thomas and Martin Lewis. The B-side, "I'm Not Making Love", is an instrumental track that was recorded in December 1964 at De Lane Lea. "Shangri-La" is a re-arrangement of the Beatles' hit "She's a Woman" that was released by the Zombies' cover band, The Searchers, on their 1965 album Searchers. Reception In a review of the Zombies' fourth studio album, Billboard said, "The Zombies exploit "She's Not There" on their new LP, a strong Beatles-like rocker that is destined to become a chart favorite.
