A: There are many choices, here is one: Frostbite Solitaire Free for the Windows Phone & the Windows 8 Tablets San Diego becomes first city to ban plastic bags San Diego became the first major U.S. city to ban plastic bags on Monday, joining at least 20 other communities around the world in doing so. The city's ban, which goes into effect Tuesday, is also expected to be the largest in the nation, with an estimated 4 billion plastic bags dumped into the San Diego Bay each year. The plastic bags will be replaced with paper or reusable bags that can be purchased with any of San Diego's many grocery stores. The plastic bags "put a lot of our resources toward landfills," said Aimee Generali, director of the San Diego Environment Coalition. "But there is a solution that doesn't take up a lot of resources." San Diego was among at least 20 cities in the U.S. and several other countries that have adopted a ban or restrictions on plastic bags. A proposed ban in San Francisco appears to be the strongest, with a vote scheduled for the end of August, but no vote has been taken in the city. San Francisco District 7 Supervisor John Avalos proposed a plastic bag ban in May, saying it "will have a measurable impact on air pollution, green space, community resources and the health of residents and wildlife." Avalos said San Francisco's vote will be a game-changer for the rest of the nation, and predicted that other cities will follow. He said San Diego's plan is similar, but may not be as effective because of its ban's weaker timeline. "We would hope that other cities will learn from San Diego's experience," he said. All the city's retail stores must stop distributing plastic bags by Sept. 30. Any stores that don't comply could face fines of $500 for the first violation and $1,000 for the second, according to the city's ordinance. Retailers can apply for a hardship exemption from the ordinance. Many people don't realize that plastic bags are not recyclable, Generali said. She said the bags can be difficult to clean up once they end up in the bay, and even if they're not discarded improperly, bags can clog storm drains. "We're doing the minimum with our recycling," she said. "We could do 2d92ce491b
