A California lawmaker has introduced a bill to provide a divorcee's right to keep their own name after leaving their spouse. Current California law bars former spouses from keeping their name upon a divorce. "When you get married in the state of California, when you sign the contract, you are agreeing to give up your name for the rest of your life," Assemblywoman Eloise Reyes said. "It makes sense to honor that contract for life and give your ex the same opportunity." Reyes said that there are several benefits of maintaining the same name after a divorce. "There's many reasons why you should maintain your name, like

Reyes said. "I'd like to be able to keep my name after I was married to my husband. It is very important to me."
