And vice-versa. So what kind of a game did the Bills get from two of the best in the NFL? Sean Taylor has a Pro Bowl talent. And vice-versa. So what kind of a game did the Bills get from two of the best in the NFL? A tale of two halves After the Bills beat the Jacksonville Jaguars 38-31 at home in Week 4, the focus was on the rising star of the Bills defense. Taylor was called for the kind of pass-interference penalty that Taylor is known for. But he had just made a spectacular, back-breaking play, forcing a fumble on the return and then recovering the ball himself with 24 seconds left in the game. Afterward, the Bills were ready to rock. The focus was on Taylor again. Again he played the part of the star. The defense scored two touchdowns in the final 2 1/2 minutes and ended with 11 tackles for loss. Now, the spotlight will shift to Sunday night when Taylor heads north for a Pro Bowl. The questions will be the same. Can he finally be a pro bowl-caliber cornerback? "I feel good," Taylor said Thursday of his health. "I'm good." It was fair to say it was an uneven performance from the Taylor who has played since the start of the 2007 season. He was picked on by Jacksonville's quarterbacks, Robert Griffin III and Chad Henne. It was fairly embarrassing. He also threw behind a receiver and made the Bills pay for his error. More often than not, it seemed as if he was not sure where he was at any given time. He was out of position, which led to bad tackling. He made a couple of ill-advised interceptions. He did make a great play on the fumble, but he never recovered that fumble. "You can make up for everything," Taylor said. "You can do bad things in the middle of a game. You can do bad things in the beginning of the game. You can do bad things in the second half. 1cb139a0ed
