Because there are many issues with the encryption of the files that Autocad uses. And it will vary based on what version of AutoCAD you are using. If this sounds like a red-tape situation (I understand that your first instinct is to ask "why isn't it working" but that's the wrong way to approach it in a help forum) then you need to be far more specific with your information so it is easier for someone to help you. In other words, research the code for yourself. That is a requirement of a help forum. There are plenty of people who will search on this topic for you. Just don't post them your product information here. { "kind": "custom:attribution", "apiVersion": "v1", "metadata": { "name": "42", "namespace": "42", "labels": { "name": "42" } }, "attribution": { "description": "Notification for 42", "url": "", "names": ["42"] } } Q: Can players vote for questions that should be closed? A quick search shows that it is quite common for players to vote to close questions. I see that the intention behind this is to prevent long-winded discussions about the problem in question. Since such discussion can be out of the scope of the
