Q: Proving that if a group G is abelian, then $G/Z(G)$ is abelian. Let G be a group and $Z(G)$ be its center. If G is abelian, how can I prove that $G/Z(G)$ is abelian? I know the structure of center of a group is $Z(G) = \langle \bar{g} \rangle$ where $g \in G$. I was looking for some hints but I could not find an example.

A: $1 + Z(G) \subseteq [G, G] \subseteq \text{mathcal{Z}}(G)$. So $G/Z(G)$ is abelian.

A: Let us first look at an example where the answer is "trivial". This example has three points: 1. It is important that the center is explicitly named. 2. It is important to note that the center of a group G is a subgroup of G . 3. The rightmost "If" in the question implies that you already know a few things. You have seen that a group
