[Acylation of 5-hydroxymethyl-2-furfural Derived from Lignin with Methacrylic anhydride and Its Purification]. To develop a method for the separation and purification of 5-hydroxymethyl-2-furfural (HMF). The acylation of HMF with methacrylic anhydride was investigated. The structure of the ester was confirmed by the IR and 1 H NMR spectrum. The mixture was fractionated by silica gel column, then the acylated HMF was purified by a silica gel column. The purity of the product reached 85.8% and its melting point, Rf and max. peak value of the HPLC were all same as HMF. A method for the purification of HMF from sugar-liquor in the bioconversion of non-food lignin to furfural was developed. Effects of vitamin E on normal and diabetic rats: increased vitamin E content in hepatic cytosol. The purpose of this study was to determine the effects of vitamin E on diabetic rats and on the hepatic vitamin E content. Rats were made diabetic with streptozocin and placed on diets containing different levels of vitamin E. Diabetic rats had plasma malondialdehyde and triglycerides levels which were decreased by dietary vitamin E. After 20 weeks of dietary vitamin E treatment, diabetic rats exhibited hepatic vitamin E concentrations which were increased when compared to control rats. (Saunders, 33:371-373, 2001).
