The Space Shuttle is STILL in retirement. I'm sure there will be many who will be satisfied if it is retired, but not me. I can't think of a more exciting design from that era. It is more or less a 40's looking rocket from the 30's. Also, of all the previous designs and intentions the guys at NASA decided to put their best man on the job at the beginning of the Space Age. While the other designs in the past would have had to wait a while to get their chance and had to do it cheaper and in a way to be environmentally sound they had a tremendous amount of already in place which allowed them to start on the next design the second one came out the first. With that in mind we have had over two generations of ships in a design that easily should have been scrapped and done with as most of it was really never built and not needed nor used. With a lot of people dying off of old people I guess the parents/Grandparents decided that it was time to retire the ship. >There is not much use for this now, and it is in the way at >the stables in a lot of ways. It isn't flying, >it isn't fast, it isn't a single use vehicle, and>the technology can be built into some other design. > This stinks to high heaven. I thought so too. But then I tried to rationalize it, saying that we must know what the most logical design should be for the next ship. But that is what really lies in the genes of the old aviators. All of them would agree on one thing, the first thing they learned was "high glide" which was basically about how to glider as soon as they learned to fly. After that it was hit and move until something went wrong. So all the designers went and built things for this idea. We can't wait to see how we build the next ship, but we haven't even tried yet. If we are not careful we will live on a spaceship made of meat. If you haven't seen a flight where the ship really went around the earth, it makes you think how damn lucky we are to be living now. As it should be for a species that has an alter ego. What is wrong with us that we have to dress this way? Or do you remember being in the passenger compartment, looking at the earth below and all around you, feeling the real vibrations of what it would be

320 N.W.2d 423 (1982) 212 Neb. 500 Sharon SOARES, Appellant, v. Dennis L. SOARES, Appellee. No. 44131. Supreme Court of Nebraska. March 10, 1982. John E. Corbic, Lincoln, for appellant. *424 Donald W. Kleine, Lincoln, for appellee. Before KRIVOSHA, C. J., BOSLAUGH, McCOWN, CLINTON, BRODKEY, WHITE, and HASTINGS, JJ. BRODKEY, Justice. Sharon Soares appeals from a modification of the decree of dissolution of her marriage with Dennis L. Soares, which dissolved their marriage. The decree entered on March 27, 1981, granted Sharon a property settlement in lieu of an alimony award, and on July 15, 1981, the trial court amended the decree to terminate the property settlement, in favor of an alimony award. Sharon appeals from both the amendment of the decree and the termination of the property settlement provision. Sharon and Dennis were married on February 10, 1978, and divorced on March 27, 1981. Sharon was given custody of the couple's two minor children, and Dennis was ordered to pay child support. An agreement, entered into by the parties, provided that Dennis would pay Sharon for her support "an amount equal to one-half (½) of her net earnings from all sources, after deduction of taxes, federal income taxes, and state income taxes, for a period of one year prior to date of decree of divorce." The evidence, adduced at trial, showed that Sharon had been employed by Omni Corporation since November 16, 1979, earning $1,296 per month, her regular earnings of $1,276 being supplemented by monthly fringe benefits of $32. Sharon's testimony as to her intended earnings in the coming year was as follows: She had been a teacher's aide in the autumn of 1979 and was expecting, due to a baby, to be pregnant in the spring of 1980. She was expecting to be back to work in May of 1980, but was able to go back to work in July, 1980, after the birth of her child. She did not anticipate being back to work, however, until sometime in January of 1981, when her child would be 2 years old. The evidence also established that prior to the divorce, Dennis had been steadily employed at
