Vaccination rates in older persons following influenza vaccine shortage: an interrupted time series analysis. The 2010-2011 influenza vaccine shortage in the United States resulted in an increase in missed immunizations among adults 65 years and older; however, the magnitude and duration of the increase is unknown. A time series analysis of vaccination rates was conducted for adults aged 65 years and older from all 50 states from January 1, 2010, through January 31, 2011. The interrupted time series analysis was used to evaluate the impact of vaccine shortage on older adults' vaccination rates for the three weeks following the vaccine shortage and the effects of policy changes implemented by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) on those rates. We included all states with data available on routine vaccination administration on a monthly basis during 2010 and 2011. We conducted an interrupted time series analysis, and tested for changes in vaccination rates from January 1, 2010, through July 28, 2010, compared with January 1, 2011, through January 28, 2011, including a follow-up period of three weeks to evaluate the lasting effects of the vaccine shortage and the impact of the CDC policies instituted during that period. The adjusted percentage of adults 65 years and older who had an influenza vaccine administered in the three weeks following the vaccine shortage was 5.8 percentage points higher (95% confidence interval, 4.2 to 7.4 percentage points) than during the same period in 2010 before the shortage (27.1% vs. 22.3%). The impact of the CDC policies was not statistically significant. Our results indicate that the 2010-2011 influenza vaccine shortage resulted in an increase in vaccination rates among older adults.

Banff Zoo holds royal ambassador party

An extra-large party and gift bag-full of treats? Who could resist, especially when Banff Zoo is home to the Royal Provincial Zoological Park. "This is definitely the longest the zoo has had a royal ambassador party," says Karen Kiernan, publicity and sales manager. "If you were planning to visit the zoo this summer, you may want to save it for later because the zoo is going to be busy." The zoo will receive its first royal ambassador in September. This one will serve
