You can download the free trial version of Photoshop from the Adobe website at www.adobe.com/products/photoshop. There are seven types of layers in Photoshop. They help you organize your image into hierarchical levels. Figure 5-3 shows you the layer manager window. Figure 5-3: Layers organize your image. In this chapter, you see how to create a new layer and how to apply a selection (and then change the selection) to the new layer. (See Chapter 6 for more on selections.)

Creating a New Layer You first create a new layer and then add content to it. The process is very similar to adding new layers to your web and graphics templates. The main difference is that Photoshop offers a Layers panel in the Organize menu and the Layer menu of the menu bar. These options allow you to keep track of your layers. Here are the steps for creating a new layer in Photoshop:

1. Choose Layer from the New menu, as shown in Figure 5-4.
- Figure 5-4: Choose the New menu from the menu bar to create a new layer.
2. Choose New Layer from the Layer menu and then click OK in the New Layer dialog that appears. The New Layer dialog box appears, as shown in Figure 5-5.
3. Name the new layer as you want. After you type the name, the dialog box automatically displays the name above the main area. You can then click OK.
- Figure 5-5: Name the new layer.
4. To create content on the new layer, click the New Layer button in the Layers panel, and a new layer appears with no content, as shown in Figure 5-6.
- The Layers panel displays each layer. If you click the little plus (+) sign next to the layer name, you see a thumbnail of the layer content in the main area below the layer name.
5. You now see the layer thumbnail as well as the layer's contents in the main area, as shown in Figure 5-7.
- Figure 5-6: You can create a new layer.
- Figure 5-7: Place content on the new layer.

You can also create a new layer by using the Layer menu option and choosing New Layer. Just remember that a new layer is created in exactly the same way using the New Layer dialog box. Applying an image

Q: Can you say "I'm very excited"? I'd like to know if it's correct to say: I'm very excited to see you. The bold part is what I'd like to know. A: Your example is correct. 'I'm very excited' is the common form; however, 'I'm really excited' would also be correct. Here's the original Collins Online Dictionary definition: I'm very excited: expressing high and sustained excitement. Edit: I'm excited to see you! is the correct form, because excited indicates a feeling you're having. 'Excited' is the verb form of the adjective 'exciting'. The war game is a Microsoft tool for creating and running movie scenarios, but it's also a powerful game engine.
