Opening and saving files The first step to working in Photoshop is to open an image. To do so, do one of the following: *

- Click the Open button on the application toolbar.
- Click the Open button on the Photoshop workspace.
- Click the Open button on the File tab of the Photoshop window.

After you choose the open method, the file opens in the program. The file is displayed in the window area as you see it in Figure 4-1. The program automatically creates a new document, a feature I discuss in Chapter 9. FIGURE 4-1: The new document is automatically sized to fit the image you're working on. To open a file from your hard drive, start by clicking the Open button on the File tab of the Photoshop window. After the file opens, you can make changes to the image and save it again in various ways. In this chapter, I cover the following aspects of saving files and working with them in Photoshop: *

- Choosing formats for the image
- Saving in common image formats
- Saving jpegs
- Converting to grayscale
- Saving in the RAW format
- Saving to the web
- Saving to CD/DVD
- Using Flash files

Before you begin manipulating images, save a copy of the file as a backup. Save a copy of the file into a different format than the original. If you have a computer that can handle different image formats, you can save a copy as a JPEG file and, if you have Windows, you can save as a TIFF file. You can save the image as a separate file by selecting File⇒Save or Ctrl+S or using the Save As button, which is located near the top of the

A judge has found Key and Peele's Keegan-Michael Key and Eric Andre guilty of trespassing at an Arizona gun show. Key and Andre, whose foul-mouthed comedy duo still hosts Comedy Central's sketch show Key & Peele, were arrested in Phoenix on Sunday when they tried to buy guns at an Arizona gun show without a firearms permit. The gun permit is required in Arizona unless the guns in question are, for example, toy guns. While sales at the gun show were allowed to continue, the comedians, who have been openly gay since their Comedy Central show premiered in 2011, were not allowed to buy weapons, TMZ reports. While the pair were in the process of selling firearms during the gun show, the Phoenix Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit asked the two for identification. This is apparently a violation of Arizona's gun laws, which many states must pass a constitutional carry law in order to abide by, according to an Arizona gun rights website. While the comedians were looking to buy handguns, rifles, and shotguns, one of them decided to reach into his wallet to get his identification. When the police saw that the comedians were not carrying their wallets, they arrested them both. The duo was charged with misdemeanor trespassing. They are scheduled to appear in court on Nov. 17. "They were there to buy firearms, and had the proper paperwork from the NICS system to prove it," a spokesman from the Phoenix Police Department said at a press conference Monday. "But because of some language that is in Arizona law, neither of them were allowed to purchase firearms." Key and Andre reportedly decided to buy weapons to protect themselves, as the duo has experienced homophobic and racist harassment in the past. Following their arrest, the pair garnered support from celebrities including rapper Macklemore and singer Adam Lambert. Key and Andre will be sentenced on Nov. 17.
