[Ectopic pregnancy after in vitro fertilization and embryo transfer]. A retrospective study of cases of ectopic pregnancy (EP) after in-vitro fertilization (IVF) was carried out to obtain statistical information on IVF in France. The data were obtained from the French IVF registry. A total of 34,040 IVF cycles were reported to the registry between January 1, 1996 and January 1, 2002. Among these, 175 ectopic pregnancies (5.2 per 1,000 cycles) occurred from implantation of embryos transferred after direct insemination or after in vitro fertilization with conventional culture. The peak of ectopic pregnancy incidence occured at the end of the first trimester (12.5%), particularly during the third trimester (60%). An EP tended to occur in older patients and was more frequent in women with an earlier history of genital surgery. The rate of ectopic pregnancy was 11.4 per 1,000 women. This rate was higher than after embryo transfer with in vitro maturation (9.3 per 1,000 cycles). All of the patients with an EP were treated medically with methotrexate therapy, and 17 were treated with local injection of methotrexate. Conventional cesarian section was the preferred surgical approach. All of the pregnancies were diagnosed by ultrasound examination during the post-natal period. The rate of ectopic pregnancy is relatively high after IVF. This fact confirms the role of ovarian hyperstimulation and the use of high doses of gonadotropins. It is therefore essential to reduce this risk and the ectopic pregnancy rate by using strict selection criteria in patients, practicing strict regulation of the gonadotropins dose and monitoring.$NetBSD: patch-am,v 1.1 2004/07/20 14:37:43 dholland Exp $ Fix filemode in compat.c. --- compat.c.orig Thu Feb 22 04:00:00 2004 +++ compat.c Thu Feb 22 04:02:26 2004 @@ -54,7 +54,7 @@ * many are actually ``weak'' syscalls: */ if (err == EINVAL) { - err = EBADFD; + err = EBADF; }
