Nancy French, senior gameplay lead at EA SPORTS, talked to Eurogamer in May about the technology: "The thing that we've seen, and the reason why our new engine is so powerful, is that we've got the ability to collect all that information from human players, from training, from motion capture from real-life players that are playing a full football game. I think it's pretty cool.

It helps us make each goal more realistic. "The other thing, and this is huge, which means it's taken a lot of extra work, is that we got game physics where we can run a match on our engine and see what it's like when it's played like that. Our engine is a platform; it's really designed for more than just playing a video game about how a match would unfold. If the match is really designed to be played that way, we can say 'this is what it would feel like if that match were on our engine.' We've done that, and it feels amazing. "Because we have such a massive change from last year to this year, we wanted to make sure we had this information to give us a little bit more insight into how the ball behaves and how the players behave when the ball is in the air, and how they behave when they're tackling and all of those other things that make the game so dynamic." Check out the entire interview for more on FIFA 22.

Cyclosporine-A induced decrease in glomerular F-actin content is not due to cytotoxicity or interference with collagen synthesis. While cyclosporine-A (CsA) is known to induce severe nephrotoxic effects, its long term effects on renal tissue are not clear. A vital step in maintaining the integrity of most epithelia is to maintain a dynamic cytoskeleton-mediated turnover of subcellular structures such as cortical actin. We investigated effects of CsA on glomerular tissue using in vivo and in vitro models of renal disease. Renal function in two rats pretreated with CsA (10 mg/kg, sc, daily) for 12 days was severely compromised. CsA treatment induced a 9-fold increase in albuminuria on the day of sacrifice. When renal cortex from these animals was examined in tissue culture, no morphologic changes in glomerular capsule, glomerular tuft or mesangium were observed. Whole tissue and subcell

Features Key:

- Improved passing animations based on real-world play: Protected moving sequences and interruptions make your game more authentic; heading animations based on the position of the ball and the player's body weight allow you to more realistically control your header while speeding up gameplay.
- New intensity animation advancements: Passers and dribblers react to unseen threats on the ball, curling passes are enhanced, and even a player's defensive runs can uncover creative ways of attacking the ball when played off the shoulder.
- Improved defensive play: Teams use more intelligent touchline pushes and game changing blocks. Defensive tackles are more forceful, and players react to opponents entering their area to earn tackles or interceptions with improved ball handling.
- Crossing and aerial exploits: Flying volleys, drop balls, and more, to create winning opportunities both in and out of possession.
- Matchday: Over 30 stadiums, more than 500 kits, authentic player faces and the clubs making history - prepare your skills for the manager's seat.
